INTRODUCTION: The San Joaquin County Department of Public Works intends to develop an educational outreach program to encourage businesses and residents to reuse. Funding will support waste audits for businesses generating target materials such as construction/demolition wastes, electronics, and school waste. Funding will also be used to develop a reuse manual identifying locations that use targeted materials including construction/demolition, electronics, and educational materials. The manual will contain all thrift, second hand, and consignment stores in the area, as well as suggestions and ideas for reuse. An advertising campaign will be developed specifically targeting the business community, using an advisory committee comprised of members of that community. Local Chambers of Commerce, Business Council, Inc., and the San Joaquin Partnership will be used to distribute information. Residents will be educated through community newsletters, articles, and advertising encouraging reuse.

1. Need: San Joaquin County has no formal materials reuse program, however, educational materials have been distributed County-wide extolling the advantages of both solid and hazardous materials reuse. The County offers materials reuse opportunities at the County Household Hazardous Waste collection events, and operates a successful, permanent outreach program in partnership with the Montezuma Fire Department. As would be expected, residents in the rural areas are immediately receptive to the idea of reuse, while urban residents are more likely to seek something new. A projected population increase of 40% within the next 20 years indicates a rapidly changing culture, increasingly urban in nature.

There are over 10,000 businesses in the unincorporated area of San Joaquin County. State-wide surveys indicate that the 40 construction/demolition companies and 25 electronics companies are generating brick, wood, concrete, paper, computers, typewriters, printers, and video equipment. Twenty-five percent of the materials being landfilled by construction/demolition companies and electronics companies are thought to be reusable.

There are 172 schools in the unincorporated area of San Joaquin County. An additional twenty-five percent of the business waste stream is also comprised of reusable materials that could benefit local schools. In addition, there are 50 thrift stores, good-will stores, second hand stores (particularly Goodwill and the Salvation Army) in the unincorporated area of San Joaquin County that could benefit from a strong reuse outreach program.

2. Objectives:

- 1) To perform on-site waste audits and visit 100% (40) of the construction/demolition companies in the unincorporated area of San Joaquin County.
- 2) To perform on-site waste audits and visit 100% (25) of the electronics companies in the unincorporated area of San Joaquin County.
- 3) To perform on-site waste audits and visit 100% (172) of the schools in the unincorporated area of San Joaquin County.
- 4) Develop, design, print, and distribute 20,000 ReUse Manuals County-wide.
- 5) Design a reuse outreach education campaign

3. Methodology: San Joaquin County will use a process that has been successful with past programs. Initially a sample group of businesses will be identified that represent the target industries: Five construction/demolition companies, three electronics companies, and 12 schools. This initial pool can then provide feedback regarding the other program elements necessary to support the program. A letter introducing the program and discussing the benefits of waste audits will be sent to the businesses. A Waste Diversion Specialist will contact each business, identify an appropriate on-site contact, and conduct on-site waste audits at construction/demolition companies, electronics companies, and schools. After waste audits are completed, the initial pool of 20 business and all remaining businesses will receive audits.

Each audit will result in specific facility recommendations for source reduction, including reuse and recycling. The audit findings will result in a customized report that will include a list of recommended changes and the short/long range costs and savings associated with implementing those recommendations. Each business will receive a report and quarterly follow-up phone calls. Businesses with significant reuse potential may receive a follow-up on-site visit. During the initial audits, individuals willing to serve as part of an advisory group will be identified. Operational elements of the program will be discussed with the advisory group to insure overall program effectiveness.

A Reuse Manual will be developed by staff and distributed personally to business owners in the unincorporated area of the County. Businesses not within the unincorporated county will receive the manual by mail. Each local Chamber of Commerce will be contacted. The Solid Waste Division will join the Greater Chamber of Commerce, thus allowing access to mailing lists. The Reuse Outreach Education Campaign will be developed with the advisory group members and industry associations.

4. Evaluation: As audits are conducted, staff will be able to identify which businesses are already practicing reuse and what quantities of materials are being reused. The quarterly follow-up phone calls/visits will allow staff to quantify additional reuse occurring due to implementation of the Reuse Assistance Program. Once communications between the businesses, schools, and non-profits are established, 50% of them should continue to use the reuse program.

5. Budget: See attachment.

6. Experience and Letters of Support: San Joaquin County has previously administered numerous block and competitive grants from the State of California Integrated Waste Management Board. San Joaquin County's award winning Agricultural Oil Collection Program continues to receive State and national recognition for innovation and effectiveness. (See Exhibit E)

7. Green Procurement Policy: San Joaquin County has a Green Procurement Policy (See Exhibit F). The Solid Waste Division and the Purchasing Department work together to encourage other Departments to become more active in "closing the loop" and to support recycling. For example:

- The Annual Standard Oil Bid was revised to include re-refined oil products. The bid accepted included a price that was $.10 cheaper than the virgin product and 600 gallons of re-refined oil was purchased. Oil in San Joaquin County fleet vehicles is now being replaced exclusively with re-refined oil.
- The Purchasing Department has agreed to co-sponsor the EPA's upcoming "Buy Recycled" Video Conference on November 9, 2000. The Department Director, who is in a leadership position with the California Association of Public Purchasing Officers, has sent notices of the meeting to all members in the area. Flyers are also being included in the correspondence of local companies doing business with the County.

8. Use of Re-refined Motor Oil (See Exhibit G).

Re: San Joaquin County—Reuse Assistance Grant Application

To Whom It May Concern:

It is my understanding that funds are available from the California Integrated Waste Management Board (CIWMB) to assist local jurisdictions in promoting the concept of reuse.

This letter expresses the San Joaquin Partnership's support for the Department of Public Works, Solid Waste Division grant proposal to the CIWMB to conduct business waste audits and to identify materials appropriate for reuse that are currently being disposed in landfills. Businesses will be encouraged to donate those materials to for-profit and non-profit businesses. This focus on reuse can assist the economy of the entire community and build new businesses based on the reprocessing of used materials.

The San Joaquin Partnership looks forward to working with San Joaquin County in such an expanded reuse program.

RE: San Joaquin County Reuse Assistance Grant Application

To Whom It May Concern:

It is my understanding that funds are available from the California Integrated Waste Management Board (CIWMB) to assist local jurisdictions in promoting the concept of reuse.

This letter expresses the Salvation Army's support for the Department of Public Works, Solid Waste Division grant proposal to the CIWMB to conduct business waste audits and to identify materials appropriate for reuse that are currently being disposed in landfills. Businesses will be encouraged to donate those materials to for-profit and non-profit businesses, such as ours, for use once again.

For many years, The Salvation Army has been a leader in the effort to encourage reuse in the business and residential communities. Our Stockton facility has a well-established reuse and recycling operation that currently houses 78 male Beneficiaries and employees as part of our Adult Rehabilitation Program. All recycled goods sold in our San Joaquin County Family Thrift Stores, located at 1247 S. Wilson Way & 3314 Delaware, Stockton, 128 S. Garfield, Manteca, and 121 S. Cherokee Lane, Lodi, California, are the sole income to support our program. The facility also operates a textiles reuse program that bales non-saleable fabric for use as rags. For pick-up of usable donations call 1-800-958-7825.

The Salvation Army looks forward to working with the Department of Public Works on this important public education program.

PURCHASING RECYCLING POLICY

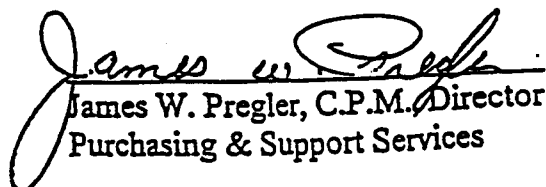

September 20, 1999

A. GENERAL

To strengthen the County's position regarding the recycling of waste; and to support the creation of markets for recycled products; and in compliance with Public Contract Code Section 12210; the County of San Joaquin Purchasing and Support Services Department has adopted the following procedure to purchase recycled products.

B. RECYCLING POLICY

1. It is in the best interest of the County of San Joaquin to purchase products that contain recycled material or have the potential of being recycled if fitness, quality, purpose, and price are equal to that of products that do not contain recycled material.
2. Purchasing may grant up to a 5% price variance for recycled products which meet the criteria of B.1. above.
3. Purchasing will continually search the market and identify vendors of recycled products and ensure that those vendors are asked to submit competitive bids for products which are equal in quality, fitness, and purpose.
4. All recycled paper products used by the County shall be identified with the statement "Printed on Recycled Paper" or bear the international recycling logo.
